Follow the Canadians

Wood house in Rainforest, is built the Canadian way, where honeymooning couples can enjoy their stay, in a house, built completely of natural wood from pine trees, elevated 10 feet above ground, facing a mesmerizing natural forest from all sides.

How we built this

Our prime objectives were to provide an isolated feel to the occupants, in the midst of a forest respecting the fawn, flora and all living creatures around. Built on an expansive area of 500 square feet, with complete natural pine wood, placed 10 feet above ground, is the first of its kind in south India, built using Canadian technology and imported materials. The wood2018 house is exclusively designed, voluntarily by a Swedish architect, during his stay in Rainforest Munnar.

Canadian believes about Wood house

Wooden homes are very healthy for its inhabitants, as wood does not emit electrostatic charge, and the pine tree log walls, regulate humidity and temperature inside.

The "breathing" property of wood provides healthy living.

It is established that warm and natural wood color positively influences state of mind, soothes nervous system and creates friendly conditions for recreation.

The wood house is an exceptional example of the fusion of nature with modern architecture. Rest assured the picture speaks it all.

Listen to the sound of gurgling waters that soothes one's senses. The water that flow through this stream originates from the mountain top and is safe to drink. Trekking enthusiasts exploring this hilly and forestry area often get to see some grazing wild animals since this natural habitat is haven to a wide variety of flora and fauna.
